JIM O'HERN

Let this letter put Jim O'Hern's name in nomination for the Kentucky Golf Hall of Fame.

I'm sure there are guidelines why a person should be selected that the committee has to go by. In making my decision to make this nomination, I have mine. Very simply put, what did an individual do for golf? For me you can divide this by two -- what they do for others, and what they do for themselves. For others, Jim was very instrumental in sectional affairs for many years. For in golf, he has had numerous successes. However, the one that in my mind was the most prominent was as a club professional he qualified to play the Senior Tour and played that tour for six years. At this point in time, to my knowledge, this has only been accomplished by one other person.

Since Jim has been nominated before, and there is considerable information pertaining to his playing accomplishments already on file in the sectional office, I saw no need to repeat that information. I do believe the following few words are easy for me to say: "Kentucky golf is better because he was there."

Yesterday I went for the first time to the new office to see the pictures of the men and ladies who comprise the Hall of Fame. I looked at each and every one. I believe I am correct when I say I have met them all except one, and knew most of them quite well. For me, that time I spent with them will always be a part of me and for that I will be forever grateful.

I have never before made a nomination. This letter I did not take lightly -- my reason for the previous paragraph. With this said, it is an honor for me to nominate my good friend, Jim O'Hern.

PLAYING UNDER ADVERSE CONDITIONS

By Jim O'Hern, Professional

Harmony Landing Country Club, Goshen, Kentucky

WIND

The common fault of the average player, when playing in the wind, is club selection. Nine out of ten times he will not use enough club. Under clubbing, as it is commonly called, will result in one or two things. (one) "Pressing" the shot, generally pulling the ball to the left. (two) Falling short of the target. My advise, after selecting enough club, is to keep the weight on the inside of the balls of the feet at address. Play the ball slightly to the right of it's normal position and hit the shot with the same tempo and degree of smoothness used under normal conditions. Never try to play shots you are not capable of executing, such as: hooking or fading the ball into the wind.

REMEMBER for best results, select enough club, position the ball correctly and maintain balance and smoothness.

RAIN

Be prepared! Don't let a sudden cloud-burst wash out what could have otherwise been a fine score. In threatening weather always have in your possession proper rain clothing and equipment. This means, rain jacket, pants, hat and of course an umbrella, extra glove and couple of dry towels. If rain comes, make sure the hood of your bag goes up immediately and by all means keep the grips dry. Keeping your clubs dry is just as important as keeping yourself dry. Playing in a light rain can be fun and your score should not be affected if simple precautions are taken. Rain, like wind, can cause a player to "press." Here again, select enough club and keep the swing smooth.

COLD

Winter golf can be very enjoyable. If you haven't been a "Snowbird" give it a try this winter and you will have an edge on getting started next spring. Equipment again is most important as to how well you play and how comfortable you are. Wear several light weight garments instead of a heavy, bulky jacket or sweater. Make sure your chest and shoulder muscles stay warm. This is most important for making a full shoulder turn. (Extra clothing tends to restrict such action).

Handwarmers are an important piece of equipment for the winter golfer. Not only do they keep the hands warm, but the golf balls as well, making them easy to compress. I suggest carrying three balls in the pocket with the handwarmer and rotate them on every third hole. Playing in cold weather and the wind are almost synonymous so many playing tips apply to both.

Don't forget to place prime importance on CLUB SELECTION, BALANCE and SMOOTHNESS. By doing so you can play golf under most any weather conditions.

Dear Nominating Committee:

As a member of the Kentucky Section of the PGA of America, I would like to nominate Mr. Jim O'Hearn for consideration for the Kentucky Golf Hall of Fame. For nearly 50 years, I have known Jim as a competitor on the course, a colleague in the golf business and a friend in every aspect. I believe that there is no individual more deserving of this recognition than Jim.

Jim has been involved with the PGA for over 40 years now and he has contributed his talent and his time in order to help the growth of the Kentucky Section. As a player, he has accomplished many feats including winning the Kentucky Section Assistant Championship (1959), the Kentucky Section Championship (1968, 1969, 1977), the Kentucky Section Senior Championship (1988, 1995, 1999), the Kentucky Senior Open (1997), the Kentucky Section Senior Match Play Championship (1998, 1999, 2002, 2003) and the Governors Open (1965, 1970, 19972). He was named Player of the Year (1972, 1973, 1977) and Senior Player of the Year (1988, 1996, 1998, 1999, 2002, 2003). Other notable tournaments include winning the Irvin Cobb Championship (1974), the Very Old Barton Championship (1978, 1980, 1981), and the St Thomas Open, US Virgin Islands (1984). Jim has qualified for nine National PGA Championships (1964, 1965, 1968, 1969, 1970, 1971, 1972, 1978, 1985), four US Open Championships (1971, 1973, 1974, 1977), and fifteen Club Professional Championships. In 1988 Jim finished 5th in the Senior British Open. In 1991 he was runner-up to Lee Trevino in the Charley Pride Senior Classic. In 1988 and 1989 Jim qualified for exempt status on the PGA Senior Tour, and he currently holds the record for the most hole-in-ones in one season on that tour. It is obvious that Jim is an excellent player with the winnings to prove it. He earned $515,000 in his career on the Senior PGA Tour alone. Most astounding though is his continual contribution to the game at the section level. He won his first Kentucky Section sponsored event in 1958 and he is still competing and winning six decades later.

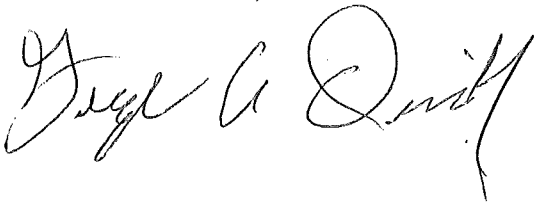

Aside from his playing abilities, Jim has also given much to the Kentucky Section as a business man both locally and nationally. He graduated from Bellarmine University in Louisville, and has held many positions in various areas of the golf profession. He was the Head Professional at Harmony Landing Country Club in Kentucky from 1961-1980 and served as Director of U.S. Golf Promotions-International Division, Gulf & Western Hotels. His experience as a Tournament Director includes Glenmore Distilleries Corporate Golf Program (Kentucky) from 1982-1985, Kentucky Derby Festival Pro-Am 1975-1988, and President Marcos Invitational, Phillipines, 1981. He was the owner of Champions Travel in Kentucky from 1971-1980 and has been a Golf Marketing consultant for Bozell Public Relations in New York from 1993-Present. He founded the Senior Series Golf Tour, a supplemental tour to the PGA Senior Tour, and organized it from 1994-1995.

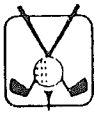

Jim has always focused his energy and time to causes that benefit golfers in the Kentucky Section. Jim served as an Officer for the Kentucky Section of the PGA for 6 years (1968-1973) including President (1972, 1973). He has chaired every committee in the Kentucky Section PGA and as served as a delegate or alternate delegate to the National PGA Meeting over 15 times. It is Jim O'Hearn that is responsible for bringing computerized handicapping to Kentucky in 1962. In 1992, Jim O'Hearn was elected to the PGA Senior Tour Advisory Council, and he is currently a member of the National PGA Rules Committee.

Although his accomplishments on the course and in the business arena are tremendous, his character and integrity are unsurpassed. He is generous, dedicated, honest, and a true gentleman whom I am proud to call a friend. Jim O'Hearn has a great love for the game of golf and he is an asset to the golf profession and a credit to the game itself and the character it builds in those that play it. Jim has deservedly earned the respect and admiration of his fellow colleagues, I am asking you to consider him for the Kentucky Golf Hall of Fame; an honor I believe he has also earned. Thank you for your consideration.

Sincerely,

George "Moe" Demling

Jim was also founder of the Senior Series Golf Tour, a supplemental tour to the PGA Senior Tour which he organized from 1994 to 1995.

Although Jim O'Hern's accomplishments in the field of golf could certainly speak for themselves, his character and personal integrity are unsurpassed. He is a gentleman both on and off the golf course, and he is a true asset to the profession. Jim is a man with a great love for the game of golf, but more importantly, he has earned the respect and admiration of his fellow golfers.

I am proud to call Jim O'Hern a friend, and I hope you will seriously consider him for membership to the Kentucky Golf Hall of Fame. Thank you for your attention.

Iuler, O'Hern Streamlining Meets

By JIMMY BROWN

Kentucky's two most important tournaments for men, the Amateur and the Open, have been streamlined considerably this year. And despite the expected scattered criticism of the new setups, both seem to be big steps toward sane and orderly golf play in the state.

The State Amateur, which will be held June 18-21 at the Louisville Country Club, inaugurated sectional qualifying this year. It will be held Tuesday and Wednesday at 10 sectional sites over the state and the low 64 scorers will go into match play the following Tuesday at the Louisville Country Club.

The Kentucky Open, set for July 30-August 2 at the Big Spring Country Club, will limit its field for the first time. The first 150 entrants with handicaps of six or less will be accepted for play.

These deviations from past practices, when all who showed could play in both meets, actually help ease a problem caused by the tremendous growth in golf and the great increase in number of players the last few years.

Finish Play in Dark

Last year at Ashland, a record field of 211 showed up for play at the Bellefonte Country Club. It was dark by the time they finished. In 1960 at Audubon, over a thousand field of 216 turned out for the Amateur. It was a bulky undertaking that was completed each day under lengthening shadows.

The change to sectional qualifying, most certainly hasn't hurt the Amateur. In 1962, 261 players had signed up to try for the trip to Louisville. That's 10 over the old record at Audubon. And the Open is expected to have no trouble filling its 150 quota.

These new plans are being undertaken under the obviously able guidance of new men in their respective posts. Martin Iuler of Louisville is running the Amateur in his first year as executive secretary of the Kentucky State Golf Association. Jim O'Hern, pro at the Harmony Landing Country Club, is also a freshman as tournament chairman of the Kentucky P.G.A. Section sponsor of the Open.

Iuler reports high enthusiasm among U sectional chairmen and sees great improvement in the sectional qualifying plan next year.

"They've already spotted many things they should have done this year and which they certainly will change next year," he said. "Plans are for spreading qualifying over two days, instead of the one this year. Also in the projected plans are team and junior trophies during qualifying."

Open Deadline Is July 19

The deadline for entering the Kentucky Open is July 19. Entry blanks will be available in all pro shops after the middle of June, O'Hern announced.

The Open will actually be co-sponsored by the Kentucky P.G.A. and a Louisville automobile dealers group, which will award a trophy and contribute part of the prize fund. The host club formerly put up part of the prize fund. The contract between the P. G. A. and the dealers is for three years.

The Open, like the Amateur, will end on Friday instead of on Sunday as in the past. This will eliminate members' having to give up their course over the weekend.

"These two factors, not having to give up weekend play and not having to put up prize money, should make more clubs throughout the state willing to host the tournament," O'Hern said.

Only 47 Publicizers Enter

A disappointing turnout of only 47 will take part in qualifying for the National Public Links meet June 23 at Seneca, reports "Uncle Joe" Dickson, U. S. Golf Association committeeman. In the field are such veterans of national play as Andy Monroe, Brown Cullen, Jr., Jim Ferrell, Jr., Paul Franke and Moe Deming and such other stalwarts as Falls Cities champion Joe Lenahan, former F. C. champ Cliff Leonhardt, collegians Dave Baron, Bill Hardy and John Merrifield and regional prep champ Terry Shinkle. Also entered is former state prep champ Eddie Schnurr, who has returned to Louisville after two years in California.

DEADLINE — The deadline for entering the Women's State Amateur is Friday, reports Mary Lou Baker, meet-secretary. Entries should be sent to Miss Baker at 2607½ Drayton Drive, Louisville 5. About 50 already have entered and a large field is expected for the meet 24-29 at Village Greens golf course at Rocky Dam Village.

MASTERS OF MASTERS

Nelson, Hogan, Snead Are Smith's Pets

By KELLY COCANOUGH
If anyone has earned the right to be called an authority on the Masters Golf Tournament, Horton Smith has.

Smith is the only golfer to play in all of them. When he tees off Thursday over the Augusta National (Ga.) course, he will make his 27th.

He is a former two-time champion, as winner of the first in 1934, the same year he took the Louisville Open, and again in 1936.

"What players have stood out in the Masters?" he was asked upon his arrival here for a speaking engagement to-night at the Kentucky P.G.A. spring meeting.

"Ben Hogan," he said,

"Byron Nelson and Sam Snead. Then you would have to follow close with Jimmy Demaret."

The four have won 10 of the 26 tournaments. Snead and Demaret three each and Hogan and Nelson two each.

Three of the remaining 16 championships belong to which Hogan, Snead, Nelson but Smith and Demaret were outstanding.

didn't include the Latrobe, Pa., and even before that when Smith himself excelled.

Smith doesn't like the power trend in golf. "It's taking something away from the game instead of adding to it," he said.

"I'm for putting strategy back in the game," said the 54-year-old Detroit pro, meaning courses should be designed in a manner to demand it. "In power golf too many are eliminated before they begin, though no fault of their own."

He thinks Augusta National is the best course he has played but he hastily points out it is strictly a power course.

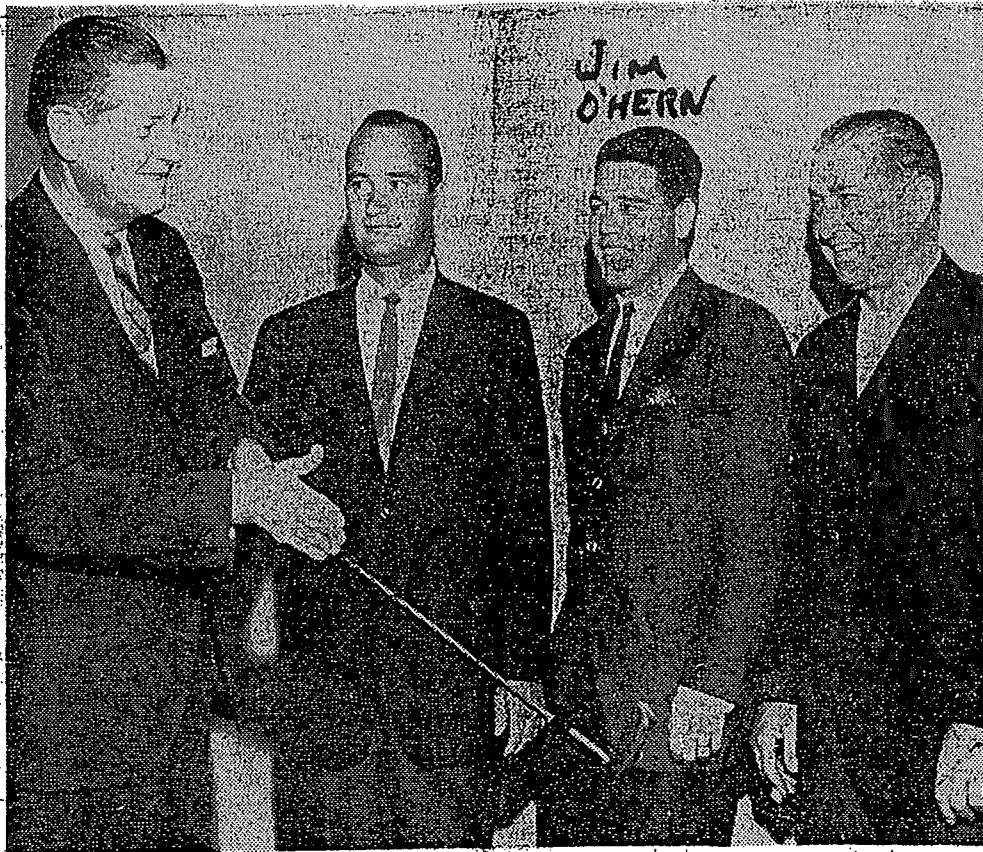

"If you can't carry a drive an absolute minimum of 240 yards you're on the defensive there. When you start carrying it 1250 and more you're on the offensive."

SMITH AGREES with the past performance charts that Gary Player and Jack Nicklaus are Palmer's biggest threats. He also mentioned Tony Lama, Johnny Pott, Phil Rodgers and Billy Casper. He con-traveled the general line of thought on Casper's game. "Billy is known for his putting, and he does have a wonderful stroke, but he told me just this week that he thinks the best part of his game is keeping the ball in play."

Smith will leave tomorrow for Augusta. As a former Masters champion, he is automatically qualified. Tall, broad-shouldered and a model of poise, Smith appears to be a picture of health. He says himself his looks are deceiving and that his health is not the best. It's an effort for him to play but when it's in the Masters, it's an effort you make.

THE PROFESSIONAL GOLFERS' ASSOCIATION is conducting a business school in Louisville this week for prospective PGA members. Some 200 young men anxious to be club pros or to play on the four middle daily at Holiday Inn Brownbards are studying various facets of running a golf shop. Gary Wirth, director of education for the PGA, is conducting the school. James W. O'Hern, president of the Kentucky section of the PGA, is school coordinator. Specialists are flown in from every where in the country to conduct classes in self motivation, PGA history, golf shop operation, credit management, golf car maintenance, public relations, tournament management, contracts and job arrangements, golf shop financial structure, club repair, display and visual aids, club fitting and sale, teaching — the basics, golf course design, golf course maintenance and first aid. Is there any doubt that the PGA is thorough?

Golf Gives Way to Women

Gal's First Swing—an Awful Thing

By DAVE KINDRED
 Courier-Journal Staff Writer

Until the moon is full and werewolves walk again, the most gruesome thing in the world is a woman's first swing at a golf ball.

Like an angry young lumberjack working on a redwood, she chops. Then, like a railroader driving the last spike to join the Union and Pacific, she pounds. Finally, persistence overcomes awkwardness, and the woman, her name could be Judie Pollard, hits the ball.

If Judie Pollard, 25, isn't like other beginning women golfers, it's only because she has redder hair and nicer legs. She's never played more than nine holes in one day, her best score is more than twice her age and her worst score is on a list of things to be forgotten.

No Complaints From Judie

She is one of tens of thousands of women around the nation who have forsaken gardening for divot digging and, like most of them, she has taken up golf because her husband plays the game.

Carl Pollard, 27, is a Certified Public Accountant who works on Sam Sned's books every winter and spends his spare time auditing his scorecards at Harmony Landing Country Club's golf course.

"I never really complained about him playing golf, because he loves it so much," Judie said last week.

After the Pollards' joined Harmony Landing, Judie attacked a golf ball for the first time.

"I never cared much for golf. I started playing last June, though, and was smitten by it. It's a very good competitive game, both against yourself and against others. And I like the fresh air."

Since too much chopping and pounding ruins the fresh air, Judie is taking lessons from Jim O'Hern, the club pro and one of Kentucky's finest golfers.

"Carl is tolerant of me whenever I play with him, which isn't often, but I know he really doesn't enjoy it," Judie said. "That's one reason I'm taking lessons. Carl gave me a set of clubs for Christmas and I'm trying to improve so I won't be embarrassed on the course."

"I have the most trouble with my tee shots, but everything else is pretty bad, too."

Because O'Hern hasn't kept up his duos in the Miracle Workers Union, he has brought about no remarkable changes in Judie's game. So he smiled and said she had correctly appraised her abilities.

Judie has been a conscientious student, though. She has aching muscles, freckles and a cracked light fixture to prove it.

A woman playing golf for the first time will do most of the work with her right hand. Instead of bringing the club back, she'll lift it straight up, which is good for killing snakes, but bad for hitting golf balls. O'Hern has Judie using her left arm and left hand. "Oh boy, am I sore—I just never used those muscles before," she said.

A light-complected redhead, Judie has to wear a big, droopy hat, sun glasses and long-sleeved blouses because she sun burns easily. "The sun is bringing out my freckles," she said. "I have millions of them."

The other day, while practicing her backswing before a mirror in her bedroom, Judie remembered to keep her left arm stiff, but she forgot about the right overhead. "I really rattled it," she said.

Judie would like to reduce her score by about 10 strokes. But if she does that, Carl won't ever play golf with her—men don't like to be beat by women.

Judie's Grip is Checked by Pro O'Hern

O'Hern, Boles Sizzle For 53

By JIMMY BROWN

If the beautiful Bermuda fairways at Big Spring Country Club look brown and scorched this morning there's a very good reason.

Harmony Landing professional Jim O'Hern and his amateur partner Dr. Glen Boles teamed for a near-fantastic best-ball score of 19-under-par 53 to win the annual Big Spring pro-member golf tournament.

Along the way, O'Hern shot an actual seven-under-par 33-32-65, which tied the competitive course record and took low pro honors by the proverbial country mile. Tournament officials couldn't recall a best-ball score of 53 even being closely approached here in past years.

Boles, a 22-handicapper, helped to the tune of 12 under par. On four of the 18 holes he received two strokes. He parred all four, thus recording an eagle on each to help the best-ball score. On two of those holes O'Hern got bogeys.

O'Hern blazed around the back side without a par. He had five birdies, an eagle and three bogeys. On the front side he had three birdies and six pars. He had only 27 putts despite three three-putt greens.

O'Hern sank a 30-footer for an eagle three on No. 12 as he pipped up 12 one-putt greens for the round. Boles sank two giant putts of 40 and 45 feet for pars.

Meanwhile, at Springfield's Lincoln Homestead course, Pete Schmidt of Louisville's Woodhaven Country Club shot a two-under-par 35-35-70 to win the Falls Cities Industrial and Commercial Golf Association's tournament for the third straight time.

BIG SPRING — O'Hern and Ray Parrott tied for second with three other teams at 62. They were pros Bill Heinlein, Paul Gross and Mickey Powell, all of Indianapolis, who teamed with amateurs Jack Boyle, Ed Pfeiffer and W. H. Rodgers, respectively.

Six pros tied for second in the low-pro race with 69's. They were Heinlein and Dick Marshall of Indianapolis, Al Atkins of Ashland, Chuck Almony of Elwood, Ind., and Chick Yarbrough and Buddy Demling of Louisville. Len Wagner of Cincinnati and Tony Casabella of Louisville shot 70's.

FALLS CITIES — Ralph Beard, Jr., and Jim Shier, with 75's were second to Schmidt in the Open Flight at Springfield.

Meanwhile, Bob Goalby fired a 71 yesterday to go with his first-round 62 in the 36-hole Robinson (Ill.) Golf Classic. He has a shaky one-stroke lead over Richard Martinez.

Jim Ferriell, former Louisvillian, failed to make the cutoff mark by a stroke. He had a 144.

Bender, O'Hern win medalist honors

O'Hern, Fabel master playoffs

By DANNY MCKENZIE

Messenger-Inquirer

For Jim O'Hern, Monday's victory in the PGA-Kentucky Golf Association's first 1982 tour event was business as usual. For Brad Fabel, it was a welcome return to a familiar environment.

O'Hern, the veteran professional from Louisville, fired a four-under-par 68 on the Owensboro Country Club course and then beat Madisonville Country Club pro Jeff McGill in a sudden-death playoff for the $400 winning pro share of the $2,000 purse.

Fabel, a former University of Houston golfer from Madisonville, also had to go the sudden-death playoff route to take top amateur honors after he and Nick Pearl of Ft. Knox finished deadlocked with a two-under-par 70.

"I just had a good, solid round," said O'Hern moments after posting his 34-34—68 on the 6,528-yard OCC course. "I birdied all the par-fives and that set me up for this type of score."

The 44-year-old O'Hern beat Owensboro native McGill, a former state high school champion from Senior High, by making a birdie on the 485-yard, par-5 first hole.

McGill, driving first, hit his tee shot in the right rough and then tried to hit a 3-wood from a bad lie and put his ball in a ditch 75 yards short of the green.

O'Hern, meanwhile, had nailed his drive down the middle and left his 2-iron second shot 15-feet short of the green and 30 yards short of the hole.

McGill's blast out of the ditch bounced over the green and, after getting relief from the cart path encircling the green, he pitched back five feet past the hole. O'Hern flipped a pitching wedge three feet from the hole and won by sinking his putt for a birdie after McGill missed his par putt.

O'Hern, who was the head pro at Harmony Landing Country Club for 19 years, is no stranger to the winner's circle of KGA-PGA events, having won five of them in the past.

For the last few years, however, he has been in the travel business and has probably had more time to play than when he was a club pro.

"I'm playing a lot now," he confirmed, "and there's no question that's why I was able to do so well here."

McGill also attributed his success on the familiar OCC course to his recent increase in play.

"I've had an opportunity to play more the last couple of weeks than I have in a long time," McGill said after posting his rounds of 35-33.

"I tried to qualify for the U.S. Open at Louisville and Cincinnati and then played in last week's Pepsi Challenge Cup. I've been playing well lately, too, so it felt good to come back here and shoot 68."

McGill, who won $300 Monday, was third among 45 first-round qualifiers for this week's Open, which will be held at Pebble Beach, Calif., and then fired a 144 at Cincinnati in the regional qualifying which was good for a third-alternate spot.

He teamed with Larry Gilbert, the pro at Doe Valley Country Club who shot a 69 to finish third in Monday's event, in last week's Pepsi Challenge and the pros beat Kentucky's finest amateurs for the first time since the inception of the competition.

John Phillips fired a 70 to take fourth place Monday in the pro's competition and Owensboro Country Club's head pro Tom Harris finished fifth with an even-par 72 to win $175.

Paul Bessler, the former OCC pro, shot a 73 and tied Gene Fawbush for sixth place and Bill Schooley, the new Windridge CC pro, fired a 74 and was tied for seventh place with Gary Feldman.

Kentucky duo still stalks skins

NEW YORK — Jim O'Hern of Goshen, Ky., pro at the Hurstbourne Country Club, and amateur Tom Musselman Jr. of Lexington, Ky., are set to compete in semifinal competition in the new $360,000 USF&G National Skins Game at the TPC at Sawgrass near Jacksonville, Fla., on Monday. The event pairs PGA Club pros with amateur partners.

Other semifinal action will be played at the TPC in Scottsdale, Arizona, also that day. Each semifinal offers a $36,000 purse for club pros with skins worth $1,000 and USGA approved prizes awarded to amateurs.

The finals of the USF&G National Skins Game will be televised live on ESPN Nov. 27 (2:30-5 pm ET) with highlights on the live telecast of the traditional Skins Game on NBC Nov. 28-29.

The top two teams at each semifinal will advance to the $108,000 final of the three-round competition, to be held in conjunction with the fifth annual Skins Game at the TPC at PGA West in Palm Springs, CA. The traditional Skins Game features Jack Nicklaus, Arnold Palmer, Lee Trevino and Fuzzy Zoeller.

Pros give Challenge Cup new twist:

They're holding their own

"It's something different," said Louisville professional golfer Jim O'Hern of the standings in the seventh annual Pepsi-Cola Challenge Cup at Hurstbourne Country Club.

With 10 singles matches on today's schedule, 10 of Kentucky's finest pros are not in their customary position of embarrassment. In fact, after yesterday's matches the pros are even with their amateur counterparts 5-5.

The amateurs won four of the previous six Challenge Cups, all played at Audubon Country Club, and buried the proud pros last year 13½ to 6½.

Even in their winning years, the amateurs seldom have had much luck beating Larry Gilbert, the two-time U.S. Club Pro champion from Brandenburg. Paired with O'Hern in the last match, the tandem posted a 3-and-2 victory over Jimmy Brown and Kevin Proctor in a best-ball match that evened the score.

O'Hern wrapped up their second match with a seven-foot birdie putt at the 16th hole, two holes after Gilbert had put them 2 up by chipping in from 20 feet at No. 14. But O'Hern believed a couple of hard-earned pars at 10 and 11 were the keys to their best-ball win.

"Those were key holes. Kevin was tight at 10, and I got it up and down out of a bunker at 11 with about an eight-footer," he said.

Earlier, Gilbert and O'Hern crushed Brown and Proctor 5 and 4 in an alternate-shot pairing. Both Brown, from Paducah, and Proctor, from Bowling Green, are three-time Kentucky Amateur champs. O'Hern has won the Kentucky PGA Stroke Play Championship three times.

The alternate-shot match became a rout partly because Proctor was suffering from back spasms that were gone by the second match.

"We lost the second and fourth holes, then lost seven, eight, nine and 10," Brown said. "Gilbert hit about a 15-footer for birdie at eight and another 15-footer for birdie at 10."

Another professional twosome, Gordon Leishman and Alex Romanoff, also tacked two points onto their team's score. The pair defeated Dale Barnstable and Steve Flesch in their alternate-shot match 3 and 2, then returned to beat the same team 2 and 1 in best ball.

Rob McNamara of Frankfort, a Louisiana State star, teamed with Shelbyville's Doug Logan to post a pair of amateur victories. They were a 2-and-1 winner over Jeff McGill and Jeff Kruempelman in morning alternate-shot play, then beat Kruempelman and Phil Krick 3 and 2 in the afternoon.

McNamara, who won the Kentucky Amateur last year, has opted not to defend that crown when the State Am is played June 24-27 at the Country Club of Paducah. Instead, he will play in the Sunnehanna tournament at Johnstown, Pa., one of the top amateur events.

The McNamara-Logan team never trailed during either match. McNamara got the pair rolling in best-ball with a five-footer for birdie at the fourth hole. They went 2 up when both Kruempelman and Krick bogeyed the next hole and were 3 up at the turn following McNamara's seven-foot birdie at No. 9.

Krick, who nearly holed three chips and a 50-foot pitch shot during his round, pulled the pros within two with a 35-foot birdie at No. 10, but the lead never was cut to less than 2 up. McNamara and Logan nursed a 4-up lead in the morning before ending the match on 17.

A pair of Louisville amateurs, Rick Cain and Mike Campbell, also recorded victories. They whipped the Krick-Gene Fawbush team 3 and 2 in the morning and beat Fawbush and Carl Owen 3 and 2 in the best-ball match.

The other match saw amateurs Eric Reed and Jeff Quammen split their matches. They defeated Owen and Jack Freeman 2 and 1 in alternate shot, then fell 3 and 2 to Freeman and McGill.

The afternoon session was delayed two hours by rain.

Amateurs find it's tough beating the old pros in Challenge Cup

By STAN SUTTON
Staff Writer

The young phenoms come and go, but for the past decade Jimmy Brown has been the most successful amateur golfer in Kentucky.

Yesterday, in the Pepsi-Cola Challenge Cup, Brown was matched against Kentucky's best club professional, Larry Gilbert. And for 10 holes of intense head-to-head gamesmanship, neither flinched. Nor even blinked.

Of course, Gilbert has stared down many an opponent since his year on the Professional Golfers' Association Tour in 1972. And, with the help of two rain delays, the Brandenburg pro finally overcame Paducah's Brown in a match completed 7½ hours after it was supposed to begin.

Gilbert's 3-and-2 victory helped boost 10 of Kentucky's top professionals to a surprising 12-8 victory over a team of amateurs in the 20-match Challenge Cup. The pros won seven of yesterday's 10 singles matches for only their third win in the seven-year series.

That brought about the type of frill usually reserved for the college types who always seem to administer an annual beating to the pros, most of them on the shady side of 40...if not 50.

A lesser man than Gilbert might have wavered while watching Brown display an uncanny scrambling ability that saw the pair go 10 holes before either could pull ahead. Both shot one-under-par 34s on the front nine of the Hurstbourne Country Club.

"They've got the two best short games in the state," said pro Jim O'Hern, who played in the same group en route to a 4-and-3 win over another three-time State Amateur winner, Kevin Proctor.

Brown displayed his short game first, making a 12-footer for a birdie that halved the first hole, then getting up and down from 25 yards away at the next hole. With each stacking up pars, Brown hit an uncannily long bunker shot within four feet at No. 7 and halved the hole.

A hole later, Brown was off the green 100 feet from the flagstick, but chipped to four feet and saved par. Then he chipped within a foot of the cup at No. 9 to halve the hole.

After nearly going out of bounds on the par-five 10th, Gilbert made a delicate pitch down a bank within a foot of the cup. Still, he couldn't forge ahead because Brown's third shot was a pitch within five feet, followed by a successful putt.

GOLF

Gilbert, a three-time Kentucky Open champion and twice the U.S. Club Pro champion, finally broke ahead at No. 11, seconds before a thunderstorm forced a delay. He made a six-footer for birdie, and Brown's 15-footer skimmed past the hole.

When play resumed, puddles consumed much of the putting areas, and Brown's approach shot at No. 12 landed in the fringe behind the green with a large puddle between the ball and the stick.

No relief is offered when the ball is off the green, so Brown smashed his chip holeward and still had it come up eight feet short. Now allowed to move to a dry area, he couldn't get the putt down, and Gilbert went 2-up. The six-time state PGA Stroke Play champ finally went 3-up at the par-three 15th when his opponent made a bogey.

The wildest match may have been Gene Fawbush's 3-and-1 victory over amateur Rick Cain.

"He made a 10-footer at nine, a 25-footer at 10, a 15-footer at 11 and a 20-footer at 12," Fawbush said, describing the "Cain-raising."

Fawbush finally wrapped up the match with a bogey at the par-five 16th, where Cain took a seven.

O'Hern defeated Proctor in what at times was an exercise in futility. Both shot a 40 on the front nine, during which Proctor completely buried his ball in wet sand at the eighth hole. O'Hern won the sixth hole despite having his drive hit a tree and drop 100 yards off the tee. He then hit over a group of trees, then made a timid pitch shot and sank a 35-foot putt for par.

"Routine four," shouted Gilbert. "It's a good thing we're playing each other," O'Hern said to Proctor.

Other pro victories went to Gordon Leishman, Phil Krick, Jack Freeman and Carl Owen. Amateur wins were by Steve Flesch, Rob McNamara and Doug Logan.

Late O'Hern birdies give pros 8-7 win

By STAN SUTTON
Staff Writer

Jim O'Hern birdied two of the final three holes to give a team of Kentucky golf professionals an 8-7 victory over a team of amateurs in the Pepsi Challenge Cup yesterday at Audubon Country Club.

O'Hern overcame three-time Kentucky Amateur champion Jimmy Brown with a 15-footer at the closing hole, then watched as the Paducah golfer failed with a 13-footer that would have tied the team score. No playoff would have been held.

O'Hern was tied with Brown when they arrived at the 16th hole. Clearing a 10-foot path through a layer of fallen foliage, he drained the birdie attempt to go one up.

A hole later, the 50-year-old O'Hern gave it back, three-putting at the par-three 17th, sending the deciding match to the 18th hole. Brown had put the pressure on by making a six-footer for par.

Host professional Dick Bradow had evened his match with Lexington's Tom Musselman Jr. when Musselman bogeyed No. 17 in the next-to-last match of the day, but both parred 18 to halve their duel.

Thus, the verdict came down to O'Hern vs. Brown, and O'Hern's approach shot at the 374-yard par-four 18th hole landed about two feet from

"I knew it (his final birdie putt) meant at least a halve, because I didn't know what Dick (Bradow) had done," O'Hern said. "Can you believe we beat those guys?"

The pros generally were considered underdogs, partly because neither Larry Gilbert nor Ralph Landrum was in the professional lineup. Both had other commitments.

But after taking a 3-2 lead in five better-ball matches in the morning, the pros won four and halved two of the afternoon singles matches.

Besides O'Hern's clutch putting, the professionals were led by Ross Smith and John Phillips, who posted lopsided victories. Smith beat Greg Lehmann 5 and 4, and Phillips put down 1986 State Amateur champion Steve Flesch 4 and 3.

Other pro winners in the singles were Denny Thompson, a 2-and-1 victor over Jeff Quammen, and Gene Fawbush, who beat Tom Morrison by the same score.

Some of the best amateur play came from Doug Logan, who buried Jeff McGill 5 and 4 in the singles. Logan birdied the first, second and 10th holes to put the Madisonville pro at a disadvantage.

Louisville's Thompson teamed with Fawbush to beat Lehmann and Morrison in better-ball competition 3 and 2.

LEXINGTON, Ky. — Jim O'Hern, pro at Louisville's Harmony Landing Country Club, shot a one-over-par 72 yesterday to capture the Kentucky Professional Golfers Association Tournament with a 54-hole total of 212.

O'Hern's round over the 6,238-yard Tates Creek Country Club Course was

Governor's Open won by Tyree, but O'Hern Player of the Year

Associated Press

FRANKFORT, Ky. — Eddie Tyree of Iroquois Golf Club in Louisville fired a two-under-par 68 yesterday to win the Governor's Open Golf Tournament with a two-day total of 135, while Jim O'Hern clinched Kentucky PGA Player of the Year award honors with a second-place finish.

O'Hern, pro at Harmony Landing Country Club at Goshen and last year's Player of the Year, entered the tournament at Juniper Hills Country Club with the 850 points toward the Player of the Year honor.

The second-place finish pushed his points to 925 to put the honor out of reach, with only one leg of the tour remaining.

O'Hern, who fired a 70 Saturday and then fired the best round of the day yesterday at 67, tied for second with Bob Hauer of Crescent Country Club in Cincinnati, who put together rounds of 69-68.

Tom Ewing of Catlettsburg won the amateur title when he fired a par on the first hole of a sudden-death playoff against Carmello Benassi of Frankfort. The two were tied at 142 at the end of two rounds.

O'Hern's odds may be 'million to one,' but just teeing up in Open 'is big thing'

By PAUL BORDEN

Courier-Journal & Times Staff Writer

JIM O'HERN

'I'm capable of four good rounds.'

It is next Sunday afternoon, the final round of the U.S. Open golf championship. The voice of Henry Longhurst describes the closing holes for television viewers:

"Now coming up the fairway, two shots ahead of his playing partner Jack Nicklaus, is Jim O'Hern, pro at Harmony Landing Country Club in Louisville, Ky. With one hole to go, O'Hern is one under for..."

Wait a minute. Who was that he said? Jim O'Hern? Of Harmony Landing? Leading the U.S. Open? Why, the odds against that are....

"A million to one. That's about right," O'Hern said one day last week after qualifying for the 73rd National Open which gets underway Thursday at Winged Foot Country Club in Mamaroneck, N. Y.

"But I'm happy to be going. There are about 5,000 entries and only 120 spots open for the club pros, top amateurs and touring pros who don't automatically qualify. Just to tee it up in the Open is a big thing."

Such is the appeal of an Open that a man with a scant chance of winning spends the time to sharpen his game in the spring, goes through local and sectional qualifying and then takes a week off to joust with windmills, a Don Quixote against a Jack Nicklaus.

Some, no doubt, hope for the instant fame that made Lee Trevino a superstar when he won the 1968 Open at Rochester, N. Y. Trevino is the exception. The rule is to fade back into obscurity, like Jack Fleck, Sam Parks or Orville Moody.

Others, while recognizing the odds against a victory, hope to gain the experience to help them make it on the PGA tour. Bob Mann is in that category. Mann is the 22-year-old assistant pro at Indiana University who will try to get an approved player's card this fall.

"I want to see how I stack up," said Mann, who qualified with O'Hern at Cincinnati. "But it's not a true test."

Depends on personal goals

O'Hern is in neither category. In his fifth year at Harmony Landing, it is doubtful even a victory would vault him onto the gypsy tour. "It all depends on your personal goals," he said. "What was Trevino when he won it—28? I'm 36 years old."

O'Hern likes to play in the tournament because it's like being in uniform for the Super Bowl or getting your name in a World Series box score. It's the place for a golfer to be on a June afternoon.

From a practical standpoint, the experience of teeing it up before a gallery of thousands against a Nicklaus can't do anything but help his game. And he has found just sitting and mixing with other pros has helped him become a better teacher.

O'Hern, who has tried to qualify for the tourney each summer since 1959, has played in two other Opens—in 1971 at Merion in Haverford, Pa., and last year at Oakmont, Pa. He failed to make the 36-hole cut either time. He also has played in seven National PGA championships and made the final two rounds twice.

"Just knowing I have made the cut in a national championship should help me this time," he said. "I feel I can do it and I feel I'm capable of four good rounds. One thing, the guys who play the tour are no more used to the rough than I am."

Ah, but to talk of winning is to become a small boy again, pounding a fist in a ragged baseball glove and dreaming of playing in the big leagues. The odds are even higher than that.

State pros name O'Hern Player of Year

Jim O'Hern, the 34-year-old pro at Louisville's Harmony Landing Country Club, was named Player of the Year by the Kentucky section of the Professional Golfers' Association yesterday.

The $1,000 award is based on player finishes in eight tournaments around the state each year.

O'Hern won three of the tournaments—the Covington Championship, the Irvin Cobb Tournament in Paducah and the Governor's Open at Frankfort. He also placed third in both the Kentucky Open and the Kentucky PGA.

Placing second was Gordon Leishman, pro at Lexington's Idle Hour Country Club. Last year's Player of the Year, Moe Demling, of Louisville's Shawnee Golf Course, was sixth.

O'Hern, a graduate of St. Xavier High School, has been a pro at Harmony Landing for 12 years.

In addition to his Kentucky tournament appearances, he participated in the U.S. Open, the National PGA and the Westchester Classic.

However, O'Hern says he is not too anxious about joining the pro tour, adding: "I enjoy playing in these tournaments when I qualify, but I have three young daughters at home and a move like that would pretty well wreck my family life for a while." The standings:

Jim O'Hern, Harmony Landing, 930 points; Gordon Leishman, Idle Hour, 781.6; Alan White, Owensboro Country Club, 602.3; Brown Cullen, Hursbourne Country Club, 547.2; Carl Owen, Chenoweth Golf course, 515.8; Moe Demling, Shawnee Golf Course, 451; Al Atkins, Ashland Driving Range, 393.3; Gene Fawbush, Standard Country Club, 315.6; Jim Osborne, Hursbourne, 244.2; Eddie Tyree, Iroquois Golf Course, 241.8.

O'Hern, Cullen tie for lead in Kentucky PGA tourney

OWENSBORO, Ky. (AP) — Louisville golfers Jim O'Hern and Brown Cullen led the way into today's second round of the Kentucky Professional Golfers Association tourney at Owensboro Country Club.

O'Hern, pro at Harmony Landing Country Club, and Cullen, pro at Hunting Creek Country Club, shot four-under-par 67s yesterday to tie for the lead.

Tied in second place with 68s were Alan White of the host Owensboro Country Club, and Madisonville Country Club's Kent Cayce.

Defending champion Gordon Leishman of Lexington's Idle Hour Country Club shot a 69. The 72-hole tournament continues through Friday.

Jeff Kruempelman, Larry Gilbert tied for lead in PGA

From Special Dispatches

Larry Gilbert birdied the 18th hole to tie Jeff Kruempelman for the first-round lead in the Kentucky PGA Championship yesterday at the Lexington Country Club.

Gilbert and Kruempelman fired even-par 72s for a one-stroke lead over Moe Demling and Jim O'Hern. Two strokes back are Brown Cullen, defending champion Jeff McGill and Phil Krick.

Cullen qualified for the National PGA Seniors tournament by edging Gordon Waldespuhl by a stroke.

Three in front of Nicklaus

O'Hern's 76 looking good, considering Oakmont terrors

By JOHNNY CARRICO

Courier-Journal & Times Staff Writer

OAKMONT, Pa. — On a day when the Oakmont County Club had its terrors for a lot of people — including the great Jack Nicklaus — Jim O'Hern's 76 didn't look too bad.

The Louisville pro from Harmony Landing, playing in his eighth PGA Championship, had a chance to par in for a nice 74 coming to the 17th hole.

But he took bogeys on the final two holes for a five-over-par 76. A three-putt brought a bogey on the 17th and he missed a downhill eight-footer on the closing hole that gave him a pair of 38s.

Putting O'Hern's round in perspective, it tied him with Gary Player and beat Nicklaus by three — and that's a pretty good neighborhood to occupy.

The main topic of conversation yesterday was the sensitivity of the greens. They were ultra-fast until a prodigious rainstorm slammed into the Allegheny River Valley around 1:30 p.m., and put everything on hold.

"The best putts I made all day were the ones I thought were going to be eight feet short," O'Hern said.

That gives you an idea of how fast the greens were. "I played here in the Open in 1973," O'Hern recalled, "and the greens were nothing like that then."

O'Hern, the current Kentucky PGA champion, has made the cut in the national PGA twice before — at Tulsa in 1970 and at Oakland Hills in Birmingham, Mich., in 1972.

Fuzzy Zoeller is the best-known tour performer from the Kentucky-Indiana area, but Bill Kratzert of Ft. Wayne, Ind., may be a fast-rising star.

Kratzert was in a threesome with Ben Crenshaw and after seven holes trailed Crenshaw by seven strokes. He played the last 11 holes in four under par for a 70 that left him one stroke behind Crenshaw for the early lead. It was a stout performance in light of the speed of the greens.

Kratzert must have speculated what could have happened if he hadn't had such a bad beginning. He three-putted No. 1, was in a bunker on No. 2 and missed a six-footer for a par and was in the rough and a bunker on No. 4 for bogeys on all three.

The 26-year-old Kratzert and his wife Cheryl Ann are expecting their first child any day.

"I expect a phone call anytime," he said. "Imagine if I'm coming to the last two holes Sunday needing a couple of pars to win and I get that phone call."

Zoeller and Bobby Nichols both shot two strokes on the first three holes of the back nine. He three-putted three times in the round.

Said Zoeller: "On No. 2 I'm 10 feet from the hole and the closest I got on the putt was 10 feet past. That's no fun. If that's what they want (fast greens), they can have them. The hell with them."

O'Hern recalled in a Wednesday practice round with Zoeller that Fuzzy was four feet from the hole and lagged to keep from three-putting.

"Charlie Coody was telling me in the locker room yesterday that a computer figured the field will average three three-putt greens per round," said O'Hern. "That's 450 three-putt greens the first day."

Associated Press

Tom Watson obviously likes what he sees as his birdie putt finds the hole at the 10th green during yesterday's play in the PGA. Watson finished the round with a 67 to become the first-

O'Hern played at 7:09 in the second threesome to tee off. He had to get up at 4:30 to make his starting assignment.

Nichols, who won the PGA at Columbus in 1964, said he had only played two rounds of golf in warming up for the tourney.

"I kind of got tired of golf and I was pretty busy at the club (Firestone in Akron, Ohio). But then you tend to get tired sooner when you're not playing well. There are a lot of severe greens here — 18, as a matter of fact. I probably wouldn't have played except I feel I ought to (as a past champion) and it's close to home."

Some quotes:

✓ Club pro Bill Galloway, who led early with a 70: "I wasn't too worried about missing putts since I knew other people were missing too."

✓ Crenshaw: "Three-footers are no fun at Oakmont. It's hard to make birdies, so I'm just trying for pars."

✓ Nicklaus: "A 79 is better than 80 and I've had 80s in major tournaments before. I'm hoping the cut is low; I'm playing so badly I wouldn't want to continue. But I could have a 66 tomorrow and be back in it. I was on the 16th green when the rain hit and I was glad because I thought I'd have to play better when it stopped. I came back and three-putted."

✓ Lanny Wadkins, the defending champion: "The way Jack was playing I thought I was looking in the mirror and seeing myself a couple of years ago."

✓ Before the rain, Zoeller felt a score of 160 might make the cut (the low 70 and ties will play tomorrow and Sunday), and he added, "155 for sure."

Rex Caldwell, who had a surprising 70, said he was playing so badly his second year on the tour in 1976 that he came within a four-foot putt of losing his tour card.

"It was the last putt of the year for me and the last tournament," he recalled. "If I hadn't made that four-footer I'd have had to go back to qualifying school."

The Santa Barbara, Calif., pro had already missed the cut five times this year and this is his first major tournament.

"I played practice rounds Tuesday and Wednesday and didn't play well at all," said Caldwell. "I hate practice rounds. If I can find something better to

O'Hern, Gilbert share KPGA lead

Excuse me if you've read this before, but today's final round of the Kentucky PGA Championship at Owensboro Country Club features Jim O'Hern and Larry Gilbert tied for the lead.

Not exactly your basic newcomer-makes-good story. Between the two of them — O'Hern from Louisville and Gilbert from Brandenburg — they've won seven of these KPGA affairs, the tournament that's held annually to decide just who among the Kentucky teaching pros best practices what he preaches.

O'Hern, the first-round leader who is back in the tournament for the first time in three years, spread his three victories throughout the course of a 19-year career as the pro at Harmony Landing Country Club.

Gilbert's trophies, however, are of more recent vintage. The Doe Valley Country Club pro has won the last four KPGA championships and his 3-under-par 69 Wednesday offered a hint that he's ready for another.

Gilbert and O'Hern — sounds like a Broadway production team — are deadlocked at 143 for the tournament, or one under par for their two days efforts and will be paired together when play starts at 9 a.m.

And just to keep things interesting, another couple of fair-to-middlin' club pros — Jack Barber and Gene Fawbush — are two shots behind and just licking their chops as is Jeff McGill, yet another shot behind.

Barber, out of Lexington C.C., had a 2-under-par 70 while Fawbush, from Glenwood Hall C.C., had a 71. McGill, the former Owensboro High School standout who is now the pro at Madisonville C.C., slipped to a 74 after an opening-round 72.

It's not likely, however, that they'll get anything but sloppy seconds; Gilbert and O'Hern are not known to exactly gag at the thought of pressure.

Take, for example, O'Hern's rather unspectacular round of 75 yesterday. Great is the number of first-round leaders, especially those who shot a 68 under the conditions O'Hern shot his, would be slamming clubs and muttering in earthy tones, sometimes under their breath, most times not.

O'Hern, however, just smiled as he turned in his scorecard and went about the business of packing up his PowerBilts.

"Never really got anything going," was the rather blasé way O'Hern described his rather blasé day.

Although Harmony Landing pro Jim O'Hern won Kentucky's qualifying spot in the National PGA Championship, he says playing is less than 10 per cent of a club pro's job. Merchandising and teaching take up most of his time.

By JOHNNY CARRICO

Courier-Journal & Times Staff Writer

Jim O'Hern got to play a lot of baseball at shortstop during his high school days at St. Xavier. It wasn't by choice, however.

The son of one of the leading amateur golfers in the area three decades ago, Jim O'Hern Sr., young Jim got started in golf when he was 8 years old. He expected to play a lot by the time he got to high school. However, at St. X., his rivals for the positions on the golf team were Jouett Brown, Bobby Nichols and Frank Beard.

Beard and Nichols now are established professional stars while Brown, a club pro, played some on the tour.

"With that kind of competition I didn't play much golf and I concentrated on baseball," O'Hern, now a professional himself at Harmony Landing Country Club, said.

Round-the-Clock Work

The gap in his high school golf apparently didn't have any lasting effect on O'Hern's game. Last week he won Kentucky's qualifying spot in the National Professional Golfers' Association Championship for the third time and is eligible to play in the PGA at San Antonio, Tex., later this month.

O'Hern's near round-the-clock job at Harmony Landing during the golf season leaves him little time for playing or outside activity. What spare time he has goes into the overseeing of a four-bedroom house he is having built near the Harmony Landing course.

"I never get far from the golf course," O'Hern said. "Right now we're living over the pro shop and the new house will be near the No. 11 green and overlooks three other holes."

O'Hern has two daughters and his wife, Sue Ann, is expecting a third child. Sue Ann is the daughter of a former playing partner of O'Hern, Ed Schoenbaechler.

O'Hern says the playing part of his pro job takes up less than 10 per cent of his time. "A club pro is basically a retail operator with a business to run. It helps, of course, to be a good player since members enjoy playing with a good player and pupils have more confidence in you as a teacher."

That O'Hern is very good is attested to by an eight-under-par 62 he had at Juniper Hills in Frankfort two years ago. However, the round he remembers best was a 65 at the same course. It won him the Governor's Open in 1965. "It wasn't so much the score but the $1,000 I won that sticks in my mind," he said.

O'Hern, who is 30, still retains the good looks of his youth and uses his winter vacation for playing. "Several members and I usually go to Jamaica to play in a pro-amateur tournament and sometimes I go on to Florida to play in the Doral Open or the Pensacola Open," he said.

The six-foot, 185-pound O'Hern first got into competitive golf on a fulltime basis at Bellarmine College, where he finished second and third in two Old Kentucky Intercollegiate Athletic Conference tournaments. He subsequently qualified for the National Public Links championship two years.

In 1957, O'Hern said he had a golfing thrill he still remembers well. He caddied for Billy Casper when Casper won the Old Kentucky Derby Open at Seneca Golf Course.

A one-stroke difference

Larry Gilbert watched his ball during the Jeff Elks golf tournament, which he won yesterday. Gilbert had a score of 69-71 — 140. Jim O'Hern (above) tied for second at 141. (Story, Page C 6.)

JEFFERSONVILLE, Ind. — Larry Gilbert was neglecting his golf game until about a month ago. Then he went to the practice tee.

The results show in two championships — the Kentucky PGA and Jeff Elks Open Invitational.

Gilbert shot a 71 yesterday in the Jeff Elks for a 140 total to win the $2,000 first-place money by one stroke over Jim O'Hern of Louisville and Bob Bray of Morristown, Tenn.

"I was neglecting golf," said Gilbert, who lives at Doe Valley Lake near Brandenburg. "I was being unfair to myself, my wife and my friends. So, I went to work on the practice tee."

He went to work early yesterday, too. He wrested the lead from first-day leader Gordon Waldespuhl of Florence, Ky., on the second hole with an eagle. Gilbert had started the final 18 holes one shot off the lead, but he turned the front nine in 34, while Waldespuhl soared to a 39.

Gilbert didn't know it, but there was to be a rush at him on the back side.

"It's probably better that I didn't know the other players' scores," he said later.

Gilbert's lead over O'Hern slipped to one stroke when he missed the par-three 13th green and bogeyed.

And when O'Hern birdied the par-five 14th and Gilbert parred, they were deadlocked.

birdies on 15. Bray picked up still another birdie on No. 16 to make it a three-way tie at four under, but Waldespuhl hit his tee shot out of bounds and took a triple bogey.

The par-three 17th proved O'Hern's and Bray's undoing. Both missed the green and bogeyed. Gilbert, playing in the following foursome, missed a six-foot birdie that could have wrapped things up.

O'Hern and Bray parred out, and Gilbert needed a par. He hit his approach shot about 25 feet from the 18th hole.

"Normally, I'm an aggressive putter," Gilbert said. "But I told myself I didn't want to go past the hole."

He didn't. He left himself a two-foot knee-knocker.

"I wasn't too worried about it, though," he said. He hit the putt into the center of the hole for his second Jeff Elks pro-division title. He also won in 1974.

Mike Strong, who had the day's best score (69), was in a four-way tie for fourth place with Carl DiCesare of Louisville, Jim Ferriell of Carmel, Ind., and Waldespuhl.

Low amateurs were Randy Nichols and Dan Fischesser, both of Connorsville, Ind., with 143 and 146, respectively.

The remainder of the amateur field plays 18 holes today and 18 Sunday.

Casper says Beard would be world's best if more dedicated

DAYTON, Ohio—The Professional Golfers' Association is giving a bonus on Ryder Cup points for the PGA Championship opening here Thursday.

It's bargain week.

Under the point setup for ordinary tournaments, nobody could overtake Frank Beard. He has a 72-point lead over Billy Casper, Mr. Consistency himself. But, inasmuch as the winner of the PGA will get 115 Ryder Cup points instead of the usual 70, Casper, Lee Trevino or Jack Nicklaus could win the PGA and overtake Beard.

If Beard finishes as high as third in the PGA, nobody can overtake him. He is a cinch to be in the top four, all of which is merely a status symbol and commands no money.

Course Tight, but Fair

We asked Casper about his chances of beating Beard.

"If Frank were more dedicated," said the former Kentucky Derby Open champion, "he would be the best player in the world today. He has all the tools and the mentality. He will be tough to beat in this tournament. It's his kind of course."

Says Beard:

"I rush home and play bridge frequently and don't practice as much as some of the other professionals do. I guess that's what Billy is talking about."

All of Kentucky's contingent agreed that the National Cash Register Course is fair.

"There will be some good scores," said Gay Brewer, Masters champion in 1967. "They'll break the course record of 66. It is a great layout. The greens are fantastic."

Beard, too, agreed that the course is fair and must be handled gently.

"Golf is a game of moods with me," he said. "I have a hard time getting through to people on that score. If I'm in the right mood I can win it, and if I'm not I could finish 50th."

Bobby Nichols, PGA champion in 1964, worked overtime yesterday trying to acclimate himself to the close confines of the course.

"It is very demanding," said Nichols. "Maybe a little too tight. But it's fair. Those who play good golf will be rewarded, and those who don't will be properly punished."

Jim O'Hern is fully aware of the odds that are stacked against him.

O'Hern is club pro at Harmony Landing. Club pros rarely win tour stops or the Big Three. O'Hern gained admission to the PGA by being sectional champion. Kentucky comprises a sectional.

This year, the PGA has fewer club pros. Only the sectional champions and the top 25 in the club pro tournament were invited.

O'Hern rates the NCR course as the best he has played on in PGA tournaments. That includes the last five PGA's and some courses which have had a lot of press clippings.

"It will take a 276 (eight under par) to win the PGA," said O'Hern after he had played the well-groomed Dayton course. "If I had to pick one player to win it would be Gary Player. It's a tight course, just fitted to his style of play."

O'Hern doubts that any of the sharpshooters will break the course record.

He thinks the architect, Dick Wilson, did a masterful job on the par 3 No. 13, where the green slopes with the prevailing wind from left to right. It's advantageous to play to the left side of the green.

Sand . . . Sand . . . Sand!

"There will be a record number of balls in the left bunker," said O'Hern. "And there will be a lot of balls hit out of the bunker down the sloping green into the woods."

Sand will dominate the 14th hole—a 386-yard par 4. "There are two bunkers on each side of the fairway and five bunkers surrounding the green. It is a desert hole."

The only unfair hole on the course, O'Hern says, is the 233-yard No. 15—a par 3.

"It's the toughest hole on the course. There won't be many birdies. The green is not extremely wide but there will be a difference of three clubs from front to back of the green."

O'Hern concluded:

"The three finishing par 4's are very tight holes. I'd hate to go into them leading the tournament and needing pars on all three. (They measure 451, 351 and 418 yards)."

There will be a lot of three-putting, in O'Hern's opinion. On most holes, you can drop the ball and it will roll off the green.

Local qualifying is Monday and a look into history shows a monster awaits the winners

By STAN SUTTON

Courier-Journal & Times Staff Writer

"I've qualified for the PGA seven times, and made the cut a couple times, but I don't think I've ever had a bigger thrill than when I first teed it up at Merion in my first U.S. Open.

So said Jim O'Hern, club pro at Harmony Landing, who will be shooting for his fourth berth in the U.S. Open in local qualifying Monday at Hurstbourne Country Club. He'll be among 18 professionals and 14 amateurs chasing four berths in sectional qualifying to be held June 7 at Cloverbrook Country Club in Cincinnati. Survivors there play in the Open June 16-19 at Atlanta.

"All I can say is it (playing in the Open) was terrific," said Louisville amateur Harcourt Kemp, a scratch golfer whose lone appearance in the Open was at Merion in Philadelphia. "I was very nervous. It's a little different with all those people out there. You don't know how many you're going to kill."

Did the crowds bother O'Hern?

"No, just the fast greens, the high rough and the U.S. Open," he replied.

Five years have not dulled Kemp's memory of the 1971 Open whom Lee Trevino defeated Jack Nicklaus in a playoff for the title. "My play wasn't very good (80-83)," Kemp said. "I played with George Johnson and a guy who was worse than I was, a pro who you've never heard of."

O'Hern admits there is pressure in the Open — "You can even feel it in the local qualifying," he said — but it was the fast greens that embarrassed him most. Playing in the 1974 Open at Winged Foot Golf Club at Mamaroneck, N.Y., O'Hern three-putted nine times the first day, finally finishing with an 88. "I was just hoping to break 90," he recalled.

A trip to the U.S. Open doesn't necessarily mean that a club pro can count on playing with Jack, Arnie and the boys.

"They always put the name players together," O'Hern said. "But you still get the chance to play with a lot of good players in the practice rounds." For O'Hern, those included Deane Beman, Frank Beard, Gene Littler and Ken Still — fellows "the club pro doesn't normally get the chance to play with."

O'Hern's success in local qualifying has been so great that he's forgotten exactly how many straight years he's advanced to the sectional (either nine or 10). "I've been trying to make the Open since I got into the golf business about 1958," he said. "I went seven or eight years trying to get out of the local before I finally made it."

"I think Kentucky is one of the hardest spots in the country to qualify. Everyone who enters in the state of Kentucky has a chance of qualifying. In some metropolitan areas you have 140 entrants, but not everybody entering has a chance."

So, with only four sectional spots open, who has the best chance of earning them at Hurstbourne?

"Larry Gilbert's probably our best player in the section right now," said O'Hern of the Doe Valley Country Club pro. "Harcourt Kemp always plays well here, too."

Gilbert, O'Hern, Kemp and Bill Hoppman of Lexington advanced from the Louisville qualifying in 1975. Bill Musselman, an amateur who plays at Harmony Landing, qualified last year in the local at Cincinnati, as did Ed Moehling of Florence. Musselman is in the Hurstbourne field this time.

Also to be reckoned with is Eddie Mudd, the Morehead State golfer who upset three-time champion Bill Campbell last week in the North and South Amateur at Pinehurst, N.C.
